WHO IS PIQE?

Parent Institute for Quality Education is a national organization with a linguistically and culturally responsive, evidence-based model offered in 16 languages and replicated across the country and in California that engage, empower, and transform parents to actively engage in their children's education and strengthen parent-school collaboration.

HOW ARE WE RESPONDING TO THE PANDEMIC CRISIS?

In response to pandemic impact, PIQE is supporting California families by enhancing its programs and offering online connectivity and navigation, bridging families to resources, and helping families to understand, re-engage and transition to distance learning and to return to school campus.

WHY IS PIQE ENHANCING IT'S EVIDENCE-BASED PROGRAMMING?

- Most resources, applications, and information, as well as academic learning tools and school updates, are found online.
- While many parents have access to mobile technology, they have little to no skills navigating online resources.
- For families who speak a language other than English, very few online resources are translated or written simply with easy to follow instructions.
- It is important that parents have the tools and skills to support their children at home and have the ability to connect with teachers and school.
